March 2024 CCOM President Newsletter Report

We are making a small schedule change in the newsletter release this month. Some of the February events will be covered in the April Newsletter.

We had a sad event that happened in Burnsville today. Police officers and paramedics responded to a domestic abuse call early on Sunday, February 18, 2024. Two Burnsville police officers and one paramedic passed away during the encounter and one officer was wounded. Stephanie and I attended a vigil at the Burnsville City Hall on Sunday night. There were hundreds of people that came out in the weather to show support for our Burnsville heroes. Several Burnsville emergency vehicles were on display, as well as a large tow truck displaying a large American flag. Many metro police officers and cruisers were also in attendance to show their support. Please keep your local police officers and first responders in your thoughts and prayers.

At the last meeting, I mentioned that I want to make our car club even better. I have set a goal to get our membership up over 300 people! We have decided to have a New Membership Drive and contest. We are working out the details, so stay tuned for a fun contest, with prizes! We plan to announce the contest winners at the Fall Banquet. Please call me at (612) 940-3446 or speak to me at the next meeting if you have ideas or questions.

Another suggestion that we received was to do a member survey. The last one was done in 2015. If you have ideas for survey questions, please speak to one of the board members.

We are still looking for ideas for events that our club members can attend. One suggestion was to have some more Ice Cream Socials. Check out the event flyers at the upcoming meetings. If you have an idea for an outing, please speak to one of the board members.

If you are new to the CCOM Club, or if you are thinking about ordering some CCOM branded clothing, take a look at the CCOM website, Member Area. You can also look at the order book and the clothing examples at the next CCOM Membership Meeting. You can also contact me at scottmaas@gmail.com or (612) 940-3446, with questions.

We hope to see you at the March meeting.

The Latest Scoop on the ZR1

It was just a little over a week ago that public tours of the Corvette Assembly Plant in Bowling Green, KY were suspended as officials at the plant said this was for "Manufacturing Advancements." We've heard they are making some changes internally to the facility while the side entrance for workers and the public is also being renovated. But another line of thought had to do with GM wanting to build prototypes, without the prying eyes of the public being able to see what they are doing, and it now appears that is no longer speculation.

Sources are telling our friends at the MidEngineCorvetteForum.com to speculate no longer as the first EX-VIN Corvette ZR1 was said to be completed on February 13th. This would be the first ZR1 prototype to be completed on the actual assembly line and not somewhere behind closed doors like the current group of cars currently being tested. An EX-VIN means the model is an experimental prototype that will eventually be destroyed following its testing. John, at the MECF, says his little birdie is a 100% reliable source, so that's good enough for us.

This news comes just days after the latest public sighting of the camouflaged prototype Corvette ZR1s, as the engineers were testing, in the mountains outside of San Diego, California.

The Corvette ZR1 is rumored to utilize the Z06's 5.5L motor equipped with twin turbos that will provide somewhere around 800-850 horsepower. The new engine will be designated the LT7, and unlike the naturally aspirated LT6 in the Z06, the new motor will have variable valve timing (VVT) and Active Fuel Management (AFM) technology. These details were contained in a leak about the motor, within Chevy's own parts catalog last October.

So far as we know, the ZR1 is still on track for a 2025 model year reveal, and we previously detailed a 2023 meeting at the Bowling Green facility between plant officials and those from Detroit, with the outcome being the new Corvette ZR1 slated for a 2025 release. However, with the first EX-VIN prototypes now coming off the line, it still feels like we are about a year away at least from having the car ready to produce for customers.

National Corvette Museum – Chris Osgood

National Corvette Museum Report

Flashback to a moment in history that shook us to our core—literally. On February 12, 10 years ago at 5 AM, the ground beneath the National Corvette Museum's Skydome gave way, creating a sinkhole that made international headlines.

The sinkhole caused major damage to eight historically significant Corvettes. The cars that went into the hole were a 1962 "Black Corvette;" a 1984 PPG pace car; a 2009 ZR1 "Blue Devil;" the 1992 white "one millionth Corvette;" a 1993 ruby red "40th Anniversary Corvette;" a 2001 Mallett Hammer Z06 Corvette; the 2009 white "1.5 Millionth Corvette;" and a 1993 ZR-1 Spyder.

While the Museum was thankfully empty, our security cameras captured the astonishing event, marking a pivotal moment for us and the Corvette community worldwide. This incident, while shocking, brought people together from all corners of the globe, intrigued by the power of nature and the resilience of the human spirit.

Today, we remember and reflect on the incredible journey since that early morning. The sinkhole has been filled, but the stories and the surge of visitors it inspired continue to shape our Museum's legacy.

Join us in looking back and watch the security camera footage:

Editor's Remarks – Joel Meyer

The cover photo is of Doug and Judy Tews with their 1963 Split Window Corvette and their C-3. I thought this is a photo that you probably can't capture anymore, as the Blackbird reconnaissance plane was on loan from, maybe, the Air Force and was on display at the National Guard base on the north side of the MSP airport. I believe that it was taken back for "security reasons".

The two pictures taken at the 24 Hours of Daytona, sponsored by Rolex, gave us some visual insight as to what our National Corvette Museum ambassador, Chris Osgood is writing about, as well as Shaun Hanna, Technical Director, who "drives (not walks) the talk". It took awhile but I finally figured out where the driver's seat was located. I'll bet that most of us are glad that our Corvettes are more about creature comforts.

We have a new advertiser, Samaritan Tire. Check out their ad that offers a discount for CCOM members.
